I, Mrs. A. E. Carson of Kane, Pennsylvania, entered the four acre enclosure of Dr. McCleery's Wolf Pens to talk with him. I was unaware that the Doctor had released a male Lobo so that he could bathe in the pond in the large enclosure. When I entered, the Doctor was not far from the gate and he advised me to go out. However, the wolf had discovered me, and growling and bristling was determined to attack me. I was only saved by standing close behind the Doctor who countered the charges of the wolf while the Lobo circled about and tried to dash in and bite me.
